PREFACE.

Nearly ten years ago, the Reverend William White Bronson, then one of the Assistant Ministers of St. Peter's Church, at the suggestion of its faithful and excellent Rector, Dr. Davies, began to transcribe the inscriptions on the tomb-stones in the large grave yard of the Parish on the south side of Pine street, from Third to Fourth. As both the burials and inscriptions date from the erection of the church edifice, A. D. 1760, it is needless to say that Mr. Bronson's work was a great one; and to be accomplished only by persevering labor, great attention, and deep personal interest in the undertaking. The difficulties to be overcome were very great, for the hand of time had rested heavily on most of the older stones, almost obliterating the words which had been graven as a perpetual memorial, or sinking them so that a part of the inscription is a foot or more below the surface of the ground. The work was a tedious one, occupying many months, and had to be performed sometimes beneath the scorching heat of summer and sometimes in the sharpness of the winter's cold. Mr. Bronson, however, accomplished it all and accomplished it well, and besides copying the inscriptions, spared no pains in establishing the identity of the unmarked graves which are scattered throughout the yard; adding from the Parish Registers and from private records the names of many persons interred in the vaults north of the church.

On the completion of the work an effort was made to publish it, but beyond a very liberal contribution from one gentleman, little or nothing was done, until January of the current year. The Historical Society of Pennsylvania, in whose fire-proof Cartulary the manuscript had for some time been deposited, then offered to print the "Inscriptions, &c.," in its newly established periodical "The Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography," provided a certain proportion of the expense, to be incurred thereby, should be pledged by the Parishioners of St. Peter's and others interested in the work. When something more than half the sum asked for had been subscribed, the project, for various reasons, was found impracticable and after some further delay the present editor, with consent of Mr. Bronson, undertook, as a labor of love, to produce the work in its present form.

It was my intention at the outset to add as an APPENDIX, some unpublished matter relating to the history of St. Peter's Church in the 18th century, including the original petition to the Penns, by William Plumsted and others, for a grant of a part of the lot now occupied by the church, together with the list of subscribers to the building fund with, so far as possible, short biographical notices of all the 400 subscribers and various other records more or less similar in character. This intention was adhered to until the work was more than half printed, when the size of the volume so far exceeded my expectations that I was forced to abandon it and restrict the appendix to two or three short biographical sketches.

I may add that before the manuscript was committed to the printer, with the kind assistance of Mr. Bronson, I compared the whole of it with the tombstones, noting, as will be seen in several places, that some stones have been removed since the copy was first made, and completing the transcript down to September 1st, 1878. I have also compared every page of my printer's proof with the inscriptions on the stones and have verified every date of death with the burial Register of the Parish, and, when such dates were not given, have, as far as possible, supplied the date of burial from the same source. I must say, in justice to my careful printer, Mr. Chew, that the occasional errors both of orthography and syntax, which may arrest the reader's eye, and perhaps provoke a smile, are to be attributed without an exception to the fidelity with which the inscriptions have been copied.

CHAS. R. HILDEBURN.

November 1st, 1878.

The vault of
JOHN AND SUSAN WALLACE.

[On the top of the monument:]

In the vault underneath, lie the remains of
JOHN BRADFORD WALLACE,

Born at Ellerslie, his father's farm,
 Somerset County, New Jersey,
 August 17th, 1778.

Died in this City, January 7th, 1837.

Long a Vestryman and Warden of the United Churches, of which this Parish was formerly one.

His understanding was comprehensive, vigorous and steady;

Its objects high and useful:

Trained after early models,

Its discipline was strict, its investigations patient, its judgments true.

His education was eminently regular and liberal,

And fitted him for distinguished attainments in the Law,

In the most dignified ranks of which he was acknowledged to stand.

His Political Principles

Were derived from the honourable and great names

Whose patriotism settled, and then first administered this Government.

From these he never swerved;

And labouring to sustain their purity and aims,

Would have averted that decline in their administration,

Which, unable to prevent, he had yet the misfortune to see.

An Hereditary Churchman,

He understood his whole duty ;—and he practised it
A faithful counsellor, a considerate parishioner, a constant worshipper.
Led by the Providence of God to a remote part of the Diocese,
He bore Her venerable liturgy thither, and the Church of his forefathers
Rose on streams then first responsive to Her Majestic anthems.

An exalted humanity pervaded his nature :

No mean or sordid temper mingled with it.

Discerning and delicate, yet active, open and sincere,

The loveliness of his moral dispositions

Was invigorated by contrariety of manly energy,

And his instinctive generosity ennobled

By permanent principles and settled convictions of duty.

As Husband and Father,

In his home he was the centre and safeguard of happiness.

Of commanding stature, and elevated mien ; manners gracious and refined.

His death was as favoured as his life :

Without pain or sickness,

In the calm of peaceful slumber and the silence of night,

His Spirit was taken to the Paradise of the Just.

Sacred
To the Memory of
MRS. SARAH BORDLEY,
Relict of John Beale Bordley, Esqr., born October 31st, 1733,
died May 16th, 1816.

Her life past in the exemplary performance of the duties of Wife,
Mother and friend, possessed of good sense, a serene temper, and feeling heart,
She cultivated the Christian virtues of charity, meekness, and forbearance.
These shed lustre over her intellectual endowments,
And were united with uncommon firmness in every good purpose,
She enjoyed through life
The respect and approbation of the good,
With the affection of many real friends,
Her dignified and engaging manners
Added attraction to her conversation, improved by intimate intercourse with polished society for more than 60 years.
Although wasting in strength from the weight of years,
her mind continued calm and serene,
unimpaired in vigour, undiminished in sensibility.
In this tranquil state, thus resigned and happy,
She gently sank to rest, without a struggle, in the humble but sure hope of acceptance with God, through the merits of her Redeemer.

What e'er was mortal, of a spotless name
Here lies entomb'd; th' immortal spark above
Glow's, unextinguish'd, in the realms of love,
And in new worlds enjoys th' enraptured bliss
That crowns the virtues of the just in this,
And just she was, if e'er imperfect Man
By Heaven's kind aid accomplish'd Heaven's plan,
Each human virtue triumphed in her soul,
While Faith's ennobling signet stamp'd the whole.
Yes, Mary, such thou wast, and O! may I!
Like thee, live humb'd, and as blameless die.

 Richard Peters, of Belmont,

 conjugal and parental Duty,

She was adored by her Family.

Amiable, benevolent, guileless and candid; elevated in her sentiments, and correct in her judgment,

She was valued and beloved by her Friends.

Unassuming and elegant in her manners, and graceful in her person;

She was admired and esteemed in Society.

In her piety, practical and sincere, she performed without ostentation, the Christian and social Duties inspired by a pure and feeling Heart,

None lived more beloved, and few have died more lamented,

Her Example remains a rich Legacy

While thy precious remains sleep here under the eyes of affection, thy spirit we feel assured, is in the land of the blest; nor more certainly will the breath of spring reanimate and re-adorn the flowers around thy grave, than thy form come forth from the dust at the voice of the Son of God, clothed with immortal beauty in the morning of the resurrection.

(On the opposite side.)

MARY P. FINE,

"Bring flowers, pale flowers, o'er the bier to shed,
A crown for the brow of the early dead!
For this from its bud bath the white rose burst,
For this in the woods was the violet nurst;
They have a voice for what once was ours,
And are love's last gifts—Bring ye flowers, pale flowers."

She bloom'd and faded as an early rose,
The Garden's pride: a sort of sovereign flower
Which, e're its beauties could themselves disclose
Became the victim of one chilling hour.
What—tho' her body mingles with the dust,
'Twas but the casket of her jewel mind,
The precious diamond, from its prison burst,
Now sparkles with a radiance unconfined.

This spot is sacred—who approaches near
Shall not withhold the tribute of a tear,
Here lies the object of paternal hope,
And all that gave the tender feelings scope,
That tie which faithful bosoms did intwine
The lovely, last remaining pledge of mine
In virgin innocence, Alas! too soon
Consigned to darkness and the silent tomb.

XXXII.

Beneath this stone are deposited the remains of

MARIA MATILDA OLIVER, wife of

Paul Ambrose Oliver, who, on the 28th of April, 1818, after a long and-painful illness, God called to himself: prematurely was this fair flower cut off, her stay on earth
22 years, 2 months, and 24 days.

She was an affectionate wife, a dutiful daughter, a happy mother, a kind and sincere friend. Alas! sweet blossom, short, short was the period that thy enlivening virtues contributed to the happiness of those connexions; but oh! how long have they to mourn the loss of so much worth and excellence!

Here innocence and beauty lies, whose breath
Was snatch'd by early, not untimely death:
Hence did she go, just as she did begin
Sorrow to know, before she knew to sin;
Death, that does sin and sorrow thus prevent,
Is the next blessing to a life well spent.
Take then, O World, thy much indebted tear,
How sad a sight is human happiness,
To those whose thoughts can pierce beyond an hour.

has left to the friends who lament her loss,
the sweet consolation that she entered the dark Valley of the Shadow of Death like a Christian, trusting her Redeemed Spirit to the Saviour's everlasting love; patient, resigned, and with a hope full of immortality.

Beneath this Moss grown roof, within this cell
Truth, Innocence, and Virtue dwell.
Say!—you who dare this silent place disdain
What splendid palace boasts so fair a train?
Here—here she lies! Oh! could I once more view
Those dear remains; take one more fond adieu!
Look on the face of innocence and love,
Oue darling feature from the Mossy grave!

Life's ills 'tis now her portion to forego,
And seek in mercy everlasting rest.

 No more a tenant pent in mortal clay,
 Now should we rather hail thy glorious flight,
 And waft thy journey to the realms of day.

BURIALS IN THE CHURCH. Although probably unknown to most of the worshippers at St. Peter's the aisles of the church are the last resting place of several persons. These graves are not indicated by tombstones as was the case in Christ Church, before the present wooden flooring hid them from view, but the Duché tablet (p. 6, ante,) mentions the interment "near the pulpit" of two of Dr. Duché's children, and the fact that at least one other grave was dug within the church edifice is shown in the following letter:

PHILAD'A, Jan'y 8th, 1785.

DEAR BRO:—

I wrote to you last Sunday, informing you of the heavy and afflicting loss we have had in the death of our amiable and beloved Sister Morgan. She was buried on Wednesday morning in St. Peter's Church, near to the remains of Dr. Duché's children. The morning was snowy and severely cold, and the walking very dangerous and slippery, nevertheless a great number of the most respectable citizens attended the funeral, and the pall was borne by the first ladies of the place. It was the Doctor's particular desire that she should be buried in this manner—the body was first put into a slight coffin of wood, this was let into a coffin of lead, and the whole enclosed again in a coffin of mahogany elaborately finished. A square hole was dug in the aisle of the church near the pulpit—this hole was made large enough for the reception of another besides herself—it was bricked up to within two feet of the surface. Strong joices were then laid across and a kind of flooring put on, over which the earth was thrown. * * * * *

Adieu,

Yours sincerely,

F. HOPKINSON.

TO DOCTOR SAMUEL COALE,
BALTIMORE.

The lady, whose interment is here described was Mary, daughter of Thomas Hopkinson, and sister of Francis Hopkinson, the Signer of the Declaration of Independence. She was born in this city Oct. 9, 1742, O. S., and "married in St. Peter's Church, John Morgan, M. D., by the Reverend Mr. Jacob Duché, on Thursday, the 4th of September, 1765, at half past 8 o'clock in the morning."* She died without issue January 2nd, 1785. Her husband, the well known Dr. John Morgan, was graduated at the College and Academy in 1757, and studied medicine with Dr. John Redman. He was commissioned, April 1, 1758, a lieutenant and surgeon of the Provincial Troops, and served against the French and Indians until 1760, when he resigned and went to Europe to complete his medical education. After taking his degree at the University of Edinburgh in 1763, he spent some time on the continent and then returned to Philadelphia. In May 1765 he was elected by the Trustees of his Alma Mater, "Professor of the Theory and Practice of Physics," the first medical professorship created in America. Congress appointed him Director General and Physician in chief of the general Hospital of the army in 1775, but in 1777 removed him from this position, upon various charges, from all of which he was subsequently fully acquitted. He was a member of the Royal Society of London; Society of Belles Lettres, Rome; Academy of Surgery, Paris; and of the Colleges of Physicians of London, Edinburgh and Philadelphia. He died in this city on the 15th of October, 1789, in the 50th year of his age, and probably was buried with his wife.

Dr. Samuel Stringer Coale, to whom Hopkinson's letter is addressed, was for many years a prominent physician in Baltimore. He was born in Maryland, March 9th, 1754, and studied medicine in Philadelphia, where soon after taking his degree, he married, April 26th, 1775, Anne, fourth daughter of Thomas Hopkinson. She was born in Philadelphia Nov. 23rd, 1745, O. S., and died in Baltimore April 26th, 1817. Dr. Coale died Sept. 19th, 1798.

Robt. Blackwell

At page 2 of this work we refer to an Appendix for a notice of the Reverend Robert Blackwell, D. D. We give it here. In Riker's Annals of Newtown, Long Island, we learn that Robert Blackwell, his great-grandfather, took up large quantities of land on this island opposite New York, and also the whole of the small island now called "Blackwell's," in the East River. These came to the father of Dr. Blackwell, Col. Jacob Blackwell, who built on Long Island some years before the Revolution a large house, still or lately standing.* Col. Blackwell, though a devoted member of the Church of England early sided with the Colonists in their disputes with Great Britain, and after the defeat of the American Army on Long Island, his property was seized and confiscated.† On the retirement of the British Army he got it again into his possession.

Robert Blackwell, the son, was educated at Princeton, N. J., and was graduated there A. D. 1768. He seems to have studied medicine for some time either before or after being graduated. We suppose that he studied divinity under the care of the Reverend Samuel Auchmuty, D.D., Rector of Trinity Church. The first notice which we have found of him in connection with the sacred ministry is a letter from Dr. Auchmuty to the venerable Richard Peters, at this time Rector of

*Its situation, opposite to the west end of Blackwell's Island, is designated on Mr. Riker's map of Newtown, as the "Old Blackwell House, now the Rev'd J. L. Thompson's."

†"At the venerable stone house of Col. Blackwell in Ravenswood,"—says Mr. Riker the Annalist of Newtown writing A. D. 1852—"may still be seen the mark of the broad arrow branded upon the front door, by the British, to denote that it was the property of a rebel and as such confiscated to the Crown."

the United Churches in Philadelphia. We give an extract:

NEW YORK, Sept. the 2nd, 1771.

REV'D AND DEAR SIR :—

The purpose of this letter is to introduce to your friendship and countenance the bearer of it, Mr. Blackwell, a serious, good young man. He has been reading divinity for some time, and I think I may venture to say that though he is not very showy, yet he will make a solid and good parish minister. If you Philadelphians are zealous in supplying Gloucester, I know of no one who would suit for that Mission so well.* He is a single man, and at his first setting off a small income will suffice him. He intends a jaunt beyond Philadelphia to explore the country and see if there are any vacancies. He is solicitous to be employed; and we have no employment here for him. He will be recommended by the clergy here and Colonel Phillipse; and the recommendation will be no more than he deserves. I can easily procure him a letter from Governor Tyrone to Governor Martin, but would choose, as North Carolina is a bad climate, that he should be more happily situated, as he is a good young man and deserves any good offices that the clergy can do for him. I think it would be worth while once more to try to establish the Mission at Gloucester, (as it is so contiguous to your city,) if there is the least prospect of success; and I know of no young man that in my opinion will do more to gain the love and esteem of any people than the bearer. He is a lump of good nature, and very diligent when he has any thing to do.

I am, Dear Sir,

Yr. affec'd brother,

S. AUCHMUTY.

Attached to the Mission at Gloucester, as would seem, was the very ancient parish of St. Mary's, Colestown, in old Gloucester County, ten miles north of the town of Gloucester. And apparently on Dr. Auchmuty's suggestion, Dr. Peters, (with whom perhaps was Dr. Smith,) set measures on foot for the re-establishment of the Mission.

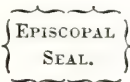

Mr. Blackwell went to England for Holy Orders. His recommendations were of the best kind and he

D. 1767,) become vacant by the death of the Reverend Nathaniel Evans, who had been appointed Missionary there as far back as 1765. was ordained at once. His letters of ordination to the Diaconate read as follows :

BE IT KNOWN unto all Men by these Presents that We Richard, by Divine Permission, Bishop of London, holding, by the Assistance of Almighty God, a special Ordination on Thursday, the eleventh day of June, in the Year of our Lord One thousand, seven hundred and seventy-two, (being the Feast of St. Barnabas,) in the Chapel of our Palace in Fulham, in the County of Middlesex, did admit our beloved in Christ ROBERT BLACKWELL, A. B., of King's College, New York,* (of whose virtuous and pious Life and Conversation and competent Learning and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, we were well assured.) into the Holy Order of Deacons ; according to the Manner and Form prescribed and used by the Church of England : And him, the said Robert Blackwell, did then and there rightly and canonically ordain a Deacon : He having first in our Presence and in due form of Law, taken the Oaths appointed to be taken for and instead of the Oath of Supremacy, and he likewise having freely and voluntarily subscribed to the thirty-nine Articles of Religion and to the three Articles contained in the thirty-sixth Canon.

In Testimony whereof We have caused our Episcopal Seal to be hereunto affixed. Dated the Day and Year above written and in the Ninth Year of our Translation.

On his return Mr. Blackwell became Missionary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel at Gloucester; embracing Cole's Church and a new Church at Greenwich, now St. Peter's Church, Clarksborough. He remained at Gloucester until with the capture of Philadelphia by the British in 1777, when the whole region about Gloucester by land as well as water became the scene of military conflict. The Mission of course was broken up. He then entered the army as Chaplain and was with it at the Valley Forge.

In 1781, the Rev'd Mr. Coombe, one of the Assistant Ministers of the United Churches of Christ Church and St. Peter's, having retired some time before to England owing to the continuance of the Revolution, the Rev'd Dr. Blackwell was called to his place. He remained in this station for the long term of thirty years; Bishop White during all of it being Rector of the two churches. In 1810 the city now growing toward the west, St. James's Church was built and added to the ancient parishes as one of the United Churches. Dr. Blackwell now availed himself of the claims of advancing years and of health not longer robust, to retire from official connection with the corporation, whose enlarged form and wide circuit seemed likely to place upon him duties that were more suited to youthful strength. We have in the Church Records* a tribute to his services and worth both from the vestry of the United Churches and from the venerable Rector of them, the first Bishop of this Diocese, than whom no one living had so good opportunities of knowing Dr. Blackwell's usefulness and virtue.

The Minutes of the Corporation record that on the 18th of September, 1810, "the Right Rev'd. Dr. White read a letter which he had written to the Rev'd. Dr. Blackwell, and Dr. Blackwell's answer thereto." The Resolution mentioned in Bishop White's letter had been passed by the Vestry on the 6th of August, 1810. The letter and answer are thus :

August 7th, 1810.

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR :

Last evening, agreeable to your desire, I informed the Vestry of your intended resignation which produced the request expressed in the Minutes following :

August 6. The Right Reverend Dr. White informed the Vestry that the Reverend Dr. Blackwell had expressed his determination to decline his place as Assistant Minister in the United Churches, whenever a suitable person can be obtained in his room. It was further expressed that the cause of his resignation was occasional indisposition ; but that he was willing to continue to officiate to allow sufficient time to choose another Minister. Whereupon

Resolved, That the Right Reverend Dr. White be requested to express to Dr. Blackwell the regret with which the Vestry have received the foregoing intimation ; and more particularly for the cause which has induced it ; and that he at the same time communicate to Dr. Blackwell the sense of the Vestry of the services rendered by him in the discharge of the duties of his office, and acquaint him of the resolution of the Vestry to take early measures for releasing him from his station by the election of a successor.

In performing the duty thus laid on me by the Vestry, I participate in the respectful and affectionate sentiments which they have expressed ; and I further take the opportunity of mentioning that during whatever may remain to me of life, I shall reflect with satisfaction on the harmony which has subsisted between us, and the friendly intercourse in which we have trod, through so long a space of time, and that of our united parochial ministry. With my best wishes and my prayers for your happiness,

I remain Reverend and Dear Sir,

Your humble servant,

WM. WHITE.

DR. BLACKWELL'S ANSWER.

RIGHT REVEREND AND DEAR SIR :

When I look back on the long and happy connection that has for so many years subsisted between us as Ministers of the United Churches, the many kind attentions you have shown me, and the affectionate behaviour I have always experienced from you, you may be assured that I am very sensibly affected at the dissolution of a connection, so happily begun, and continued so long with such uninterrupted harmony and good will. I am fully persuaded, that nothing will interrupt the friendly understanding that now subsists between us ; but that, as we pass down the vale of years, our brotherly affection will know no change, but in its increase ; and that as we draw nearer the close of life, our hopes of happiness will become brighter and brighter.

My Dear Sir,—You will please to express to the Vestry the satisfaction I feel, at the kind and friendly notice they have taken of my past services ; and assure them that they were always performed with a willing heart, a sincere mind, and an ardent desire that they might be useful and acceptable to the congregation.

It is my earnest prayer, that their labours in promoting the interest and welfare of the United Churches may be crowned with full success. My best wishes shall ever attend them.

Right Reverend and Dear Sir, with the highest esteem and veneration for your many amiable and Christian virtues, and with the sincerest wishes for your long life, health and happiness,

I am your affectionate friend and brother,

ROBERT BLACKWELL.

8th August, 1810.

The Right Rev'd. William White, D.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in the State of Pennsylvania.

On the 14th of May, 1811, the Reverend Jackson Kemper, (afterwards the first Missionary Bishop of the West,) was elected an Assistant in the place of Dr. Blackwell: and we fix the termination of Dr. Blackwell's official relation to the United Churches from that day. On the same day the Vestry makes this request:

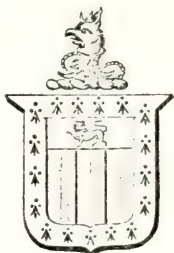

The Vestry request that the Church Warden present their thanks to the Reverend Dr. Blackwell, for his past service, and at the same time express their hope, that notwithstanding his resignation, he will occasionally favour them with his sermons when the Rector or either of the Assistant Ministers may request.

Griswold in his "Republican Court, or Society in the of days Washington," describes Dr. Blackwell as a man of large fortune, fine appearance, and singularly pleasant temper and manner. He was "a scholarly and sensible preacher of the English university cast. His sermons, of the homiletical kind were, like those of the higher classes of the English clergy in the last century, calculated for educated hearers more than to arouse an indifferent or slumbering congregation. Being withal a man of unquestioned piety and great propriety of life, he maintained a dignified position, and was extensively deferred to by an opulent and worldly class, who would probably have deferred to no one else less blessed with adventitious influence."

Dr. Blackwell was a friend and faithful manager of the Philadelphia Dispensary, an institution established A. D. 1786, and still existing, for the relief of the indigent sick; a trustee of the Episcopal Academy; a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania; a member of the American Philosophical Society; a member of the Society for Political Inquiries, established A. D. 1787, and composed of the first men of the nation, and of such alone or chiefly. Of this Society, limited to forty in number, Dr. Franklin, Major William Jackson, Francis Hopkinson, Samuel Powel, James Wilson, William Bradford, Jr., John Nixon, George Clymer, Jared Ingersoll, Thomas Fitzsimons, Robert Morris, Edward Shippen, Edward Tilghman, Gouverneur Morris, William Bingham, and a few other persons were members. It met, except in the summer months, at the house of Dr. Franklin. He was also a member of the Corporation for the Relief of the Widows and Children of the Episcopal Clergy from 1773 to 1831, and from 1803 to 1814 its Treasurer for Pennsylvania; Treasurer of the Church Conventions, both General and Diocesan; and a representative from Pennsylvania in the General Convention of 1785, by which the Church was re-established in America, as also in the subsequent ones of 1789, 1795; 1799, 1801, 1804 and 1809.

While residing at Gloucester Dr. Blackwell married Miss Rebecca Harrison, daughter of Joseph and Ann Harrison of that place. She died early, leaving an infant daughter, who in after years became the wife of George Willing, Esquire. After coming to Philadelphia Dr. Blackwell married a daughter of William Bingham, the elder; a sister of William Bingham who at one time was Senator of the United States from Pennsylvania; but no issue of this marriage survived. When he became settled in his position his residence was on the south side of Pine street, between Second and Third, in a fine old mansion, (formerly No. 50, now No. 224,) which is yet standing. He died there in February 1831. By his last will he founded a scholarship in the General Theological Seminary of New York, which is in the gift of the Bishop of Pennsylvania. The inscription on the next page has been suggested for a tablet to his memory.

Sacred to the Memory of

THE REVEREND ROBERT BLACKWELL, D. D.,

Ordained to the Ministry in England June 11th, 1772, by the Bishop of London.
 Missionary, A. D. 1777, in Gloucester County, New Jersey.
 During the War for Independence, Chaplain to the First Pennsylvania Brigade.
 And in the Winter of 1777-8, Surgeon to some of the Refugees at the Valley Forge.
 From 1781 till 1811, one of the Assistants in the Ministry of the United Church
 Of Christ Church and St. Peter's, Philadelphia.
 And during the closing years of the War.
 One of the only two clergymen of the Church of England
 Whom the dissolution of that time left
 In the extensive State of Pennsylvania;
 His friend and ministerial associate of thirty years,
 THE REVEREND WILLIAM WHITE,
 Afterwards Bishop of this Diocese,
 Being the other;

THE PASTOR OF WASHINGTON.

Born May 6th, 1745—Died February 12th, 1831

In the councils of the Church, which he assisted to perpetuate in these United States,
 And in the earliest and most important of whose Conventions,
 Both General and Diocesan,
 He was a constant participator,
 He acquired general respect,
 By his adherence to principle, his temperateness of conduct
 And the practical wisdom of all his suggestions.

In the sphere of parochial charge,
 He was distinguished by propriety of life,
 And by the sincerity of feeling, the clearness of argument, and soundness of scholarship,
 With which, in the spirit of charity,
 He inculcated the duties and doctrines declared by Religion and the Church.

Blessed, in his private station,
 With fortune above what is common to his Profession,
 He gave a convincing proof of the effect on his own heart
 Of those precepts which he urged upon others,
 In an unostentatious but constant and liberal charity towards the poor,
 From whom his face was never turned away,
 Nor any portion for relief addressed in vain.

He was not more respectable in his public and sacred office,
 Than engaging and amiable in social and domestic life.
 A true person and benevolent companion,
 With a natural sweetness of temper and a liberality of feeling,
 United to manners refined by early associations,
 And made liberal by foreign travel, an intercourse with military life and character,
 Rendered him eminently agreeable to all.

Having for thirty years, without intermission,
 Discharged with fidelity the duties of his official station,
 In two extensive parishes,
 He yielded, in his sixty-seventh year, on their union with a third,
 To the necessities of health, now a constant complaint,
 And resigned his ancient, formal connection with the parishes of these congregations;
 But attending occasionally to the services of the church, and aiding frequently in its holy ministrations;
 He received and assented to the offer of a salary of thirty dollars annually, by the church on 1st May 1828,
 Which, in possession of such facilities, and in readiness to the author and giver of them,
 He was enabled from the date of his appointment to discharge with ease and vigor to the full,
 To the expectation of their reward in the bosoms of an eternal world.

He was the Son of Jacob and Frances Blackwell, of Long Island, New York,
 And descended of an ancient family, or family of England,
 But afterwards settled in this country; one of several who had accompanied his father, Robert Blackwell,
 Became, in 1666, an extensive proprietor of lands in this State River and on Long Island, New York,
 His father, however, was never in this country.

He married, January 17th, 1780, Rebecca, daughter of Joseph and Ann Harrison, of New Jersey.

In Remembrance of his Virtues,
 And in grateful recollection of his services in her Youth,
 One of his Descendants
 Hath caused this Monument to be established to his Memory.

Th. Coombe

THOMAS COOMBE, D.D. Thomas Coombe, born in Philadelphia on the 12th of October, 1747, O. S., and baptised in Christ Church, November the 5th following, was the eldest surviving son of Thomas Coombe, also a native of this city, by his wife Sarah, daughter of Thomas Rutter. The father of the clergyman was a gentleman of wealth and position, and gave his son all the advantages of education afforded by the Province. He was graduated in 1766, at the College and Academy of Philadelphia, and having decided to enter the ministry, after some preparatory study under Dr. William Smith, went to England in the spring of 1768, for the purpose of being admitted to Holy Orders. His classmate John Montgomery, accompanied him on the same errand. They were thus recommended by Drs. Peters and Smith and Mr. Duché in a letter to the Bishop of London, dated April 28, 1768—"They are well versed in Composition and are excellent Speakers; Mr. Coombe in particular being admired for his Talent in this way."* Before the close of the year he was admitted to Deacon's Orders and soon afterwards ordained Priest, by the Rev. Dr. Terrick, Bishop of London.

He remained in England about three years, during the greater part of the time acting as curate in London, where he soon attained great popularity as a preacher. In May 1769, within a year of his arrival, we find him "pre-engaged to preach no less than six Charity Sermons, for so many different Parishes,"† and much of his time was similarly occupied throughout the rest of his stay. The Marquis of Rockingham, in 1771, appointed him one of his chaplains, a position entailing the performance of no duties, but much sought after as it conferred the right to hold more than one benefice.

*Hist. Collections relating to the Am. Colonial Church, Pennsylvania, p. 426.

†Pennsylvania Gazette, August 3, 1769.

He returned home early in 1772 and for some time freely gave his services to the United Churches. At the meeting of the Vestry in June, the Rector, Dr. Peters, urged his and Mr. White's appointment as assistant ministers; the Vestry, however, were in doubt as to whether the revenue of the parish was large enough to permit the payment of additional salaries, and deferred further action until the 16th of November when they requested the Rector "to confer with Mr. Coombe and Mr. White and know of them on what terms they would be satisfied to become assistant ministers." In compliance with this request, Dr. Peters wrote to Mr. Coombe, who replied—

November 21, 1772.

DEAR AND REVEREND SIR :

I find myself a good deal at a loss how properly to answer your polite letter. A desire to avoid the appearance of covetousness, and everything that may look like driving a bargain, in a concern when our motives should be the most generous on both sides, would urge me to undertake the service of the Church on almost any terms; but my particular situation and wants represent it to me in the light of duty not to involve myself and my connections in poverty, through a mistaken notion of disinterestedness. Sir, every gentleman in your vestry is a better judge of what can support a family decently, than I can be supposed to be. They have already provided salaries for assistant ministers, at a time when the expenses of living were much more reasonable than they are at present; and having these facts before them, I rather wish a proposal on their part, than offer a demand on mine.

I sincerely thank you for the wish you express that no time may be lost in bringing this affair to a conclusion, and am,

Dear Sir, your most obedient, affectionate servant,

TH. COOMBE.

REV. DR. PETERS.

The Vestry still hesitated, and it was only on the 30th of November, when Dr. Peters offered to give each of them, one hundred pounds annually in addition to such salary as might be voted by the Vestry, that the election was proceeded with. The sum voted Mr. Coombe from the parish funds was two hundred pounds, which with Dr. Peter's gift formed "a decent competency" and enabled him to carry out his intended marriage with Miss Sarah Ann Leake Badger, which he did on the 13th of May following.

During the ensuing five years his connection was mainly with St. Peter's Church, and he rapidly acquired a brilliant reputation as a preacher. Josiah Quincey, Junior, an able lawyer, an ardent patriot and apparently no great admirer of liturgic worship, who visited Philadelphia in 1773, writes in his diary that on April 24th, the day after his arrival, "Went to public worship at St. Peter's Church, and heard the celebrated orator, the Rev. Mr. Coombe, an Episcopalian. He labored to speak with propriety, and was therefore not altogether natural: he was a little affected, but spoke well. This may seem a paradox, but I cannot better convey my idea of him. In prayer, he had the faults of most clergymen who use established forms; his emphasis, look, accent, and gesture, were not conformable to his subject, station, and language. He made an extempore prayer before the sermon, which, in point of sentiment, propriety of expression, and true sublimity, excelled any thing of the kind I ever heard. This prayer he uttered with singular grace. His sermon was twenty minutes in length, and was an extremely fine, moral, elegant declamation—decorated with all the beauties of style, language and rhetorical utterance."* Silas Deane while attending the Congress of 1774 writes "After dinner, finding neither Mr. Sprout nor Mr. Spencer preached, I pushed on and heard Mr. Coombe, who is called a rival to Mr. Deshay."†

Rumors of Mr. Coombe's increasing reputation found a friendly ear in London. Dr. Franklin, with whom he occasionally corresponded, wrote him the following letter:—

*Mémorial of Josiah Quincey, Junior, p. 131.

†Collections of the Connecticut Historical Society, Vol. II, p. 182.

I received with great pleasure yours of May 15th, as it informed me of your health and happiness. I thank you for your Sermon, which I read with satisfaction. I am glad that of my good Bishop pleased you. I enclose a speech of his on the same subject. It is deemed here a masterpiece of eloquence. I send also the last edition of some lines of your friend Goldsmith, with the addition of my friend Whitefoord's epitaph, whom you may remember. Also the "Heroic Postscript," the author of which is yet unknown.

He may be fond of fame as a poet ; but, if he is, his prudence predominates at present, and prevails with him to shun it. That which you are acquiring as an orator, gives me pleasure as your friend ; and it will give you the most solid satisfaction, if you find that by your eloquence you can turn many to righteousness. Without this effect, the preacher or the priest, in my opinion, is not merely sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal, which are innocent things ; he is rather like the cunning man in the Old Bailey, who conjures and tells fools their fortunes to cheat them out of their money.

Yours, affectionately,

B. FRANKLIN.

In the political troubles of the time Mr. Coombe, until the question of separation became the great test, was in sympathy with the Colonies. In his sermon of the 20th of July, 1775, he exclaims, "We asked but for peace liberty and safety ; privileges derived from heaven and the constitution, sanctified by the faith of charters, and which no power on earth, without our own consent hath authority to dis-annul. And since I am called to the office of speaking before you on this subject ; it is my duty to declare, that they are privileges, which, had we been so tame as to have surrendered without a struggle, we should have been guilty of treason to posterity." When however the Declaration of Independence announced that a total severance from Great Britain was the object in view, Mr. Coombe gave his adherence to the parent country. For a time he remained unmolested, but at length a number of the wealthier Quakers, having made themselves obnoxious, Congress recommended their arrest, and the Supreme Executive Council, in order to terrify the disaffected, added some thirty names to the list suggested by Congress, and issued a warrant for their arrest. Mr. Coombe was among the proscribed, and on the 3rd of September he was seized and conveyed to Mason's Lodge, the place of confinement designated by the warrant. An appeal to the Council was at once made in his behalf by Mr. Duché and the Vestry of the United Churches, earnestly requesting "that Mr. Coombe may be admitted, as his undoubted birthright, to a hearing in the face of his country." To this Vice President Bryan replied that "Mr. Coombe's case was wholly political," and that before the receipt of their petition "the Council had determined to send away Mr. Coombe and the rest of the prisoners, and that his connection with their congregation could be no argument in his behalf.* He remained a prisoner until the 10th of September, when the Rev. Mr. White and Col. John Cadwalader, appeared in his behalf, before the Council and obtained permission for him "to go to Virginia under Parole, and from thence to the Island of St. Eustatia."† A day or two after his release he was taken ill, and before he had sufficiently recovered to bear the fatigues of his intended journey, the British troops were in possession of Philadelphia. He did not, as has been said, avail himself of this opportunity to escape, but waited for some days after the Royal Army had retired from this city, hoping that events would so shape themselves that he might yet be able to remain without violating the oath he had taken at his ordination. In this he was disappointed, for he was summoned to appear before the Council, and given the option of abjuring his allegiance to the Crown or leaving the country. Preferring the latter course Mr. Coombe called a meeting of the Vestry of the United Churches, of which since the departure of Dr. Duché in December he had had sole charge, he laid the following letter before them :

GENTLEMEN,

I have given you the trouble of this meeting, to inform you of my having applied for, and obtained, leave from the Council to proceed within the British lines at New York, and from thence to England. The step I have taken, is to me a most important one, including a great variety of affecting circumstances ; and therefore it was not entered upon without some heartaches, and many a sorrowful anticipation. To go into voluntary banishment from my native city, where it was ever my first pride to be a clergyman ; to quit a decent competency among a people whom I affectionately respect and love, and launch out upon the ocean of the world, unknowing what shelter may hereafter be afforded me, is a hard trial for nature. By the uncandid, my determination will be censured, as precipitate ; and even persons disposed to form the most favourable judgment, will find it difficult to justify a conduct so different from their own.

Thus situated, I have only the integrity of my own heart to support me. Having examined the subject in every point of view that I was capable of placing it ; having read such books, and conferred with such wise and good men, as I thought might throw light upon the subject, I found that I could not take the oath to the new government, without the saddest violation of my own peace of mind. To have taken this oath, while under the smallest doubt concerning its lawfulness, might prove a source of much future anxiety to a retrospective temper ; but to have done so, under the full conviction of its repugnancy to prior obligations, would have been the most criminal duplicity.

I have for some time had the present event in prospect, but was determined to tread with caution ; accordingly I remained in town after the departure of the King's army, to give myself the further chance of continuing in my living, if it were to be done consistently with my principles ; or if Great Britain had judged it proper to subscribe to the independence of America, my path would have been plain.

But since the sovereign still keeps up his claim of right upon this country, and every inhabitant is called upon by the late test law to renounce all allegiance to him, I had only to choose between my duty and my interest. Through what vicissitudes I am to pass, in consequence of the part I have resolved upon, He only knoweth who is the Providential ruler of the World. When I consider my little family whom I leave behind, and the difficulties to be encountered in providing them a heritage in a distant country, many painful ideas crowd into my bosom. Gracious God, who art the guardian of the innocent, to thee I commit them !

In following what I believe to be the clear light of duty, I trust I shall not want His blessing ; and whilst I encourage the hope that a door will be opened to me in some more hospitable region, I shall labour to prepare my mind for the humblest dispensations.

As to you, gentlemen, and the congregations you represent, everything that is due from a minister to a generous and worthy people, belongs to you. Accept my poor thanks for all your kindness.

You, I know, will do me the justice to believe, that nothing but a conviction of my higher obligations could have induced me to quit a charge from which I have received such liberal encouragement. I recommend you, and all my dear connections to the protection of the best of Masters. Daily and fervently shall my prayers ascend to him for your temporal and eternal happiness.

He hath told us, that in this world we shall have tribulation; but bids us be of good cheer, for that He hath overcome the world. Finally, brethren, farewell, live in peace, and the God of love and peace be with you.

I am,

Most affectionately yours,

July 7th, 1778.

TH. COOMBE.

A few days later he set out for New York and after a short stay there, sailed for England. He had left his wife and child in Philadelphia, where they were to remain until he could provide a new home for them. But almost the first news that reached him after his arrival were the melancholy tidings of his wife's death.*

While in New York, Mr. Coombe met the Earl of Carlisle, one of the Commissioners, sent out by Great Britain to attempt a reconcillation of the colonies, and after Carlisle's return from his fruitless mission, became his private Chaplain. In 1780 Lord Carlisle was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and Mr. Coombe accompanied him to Dublin as his private Secretary. In the ensuing year he was presented to the Rectory of Donagh Henry, in the north of Ireland, and the University of Dublin conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. On the recall of Lord Carlisle in 1783, Dr. Coombe resigned his Irish benefice and returned with him to England, where for more than ten years he continued to be his Lordship's Chaplain and Secretary. His relations with Lord Carlisle were so agreeable to him that in 1789 he declined to become Chaplain to the English Embassy at the Hague.

*Mrs. Coombe's death is thus noticed in the Postscript (dated Tuesday October 19th, 1778.) to the Pennsylvania Evening Post, No. 542 — "Last Sunday morning did, in child-bed, Mrs. Sarah Coombe, in the 26th year of her age, the amiable consort of the Rev. Thomas Coombe, late of this city. And yesterday her remains were interred in Christ Church burying ground, attended by a number of respectable inhabitants. She was delivered of twins, a boy and a girl, both of them living and in good health."

In 1794 Dr. Coombe was appointed one of the Chaplains in Ordinary to the King, and about the same time Minister at Curzon Street Chapel, where his eloquent sermons soon gained him a wide-spread popularity. In 1800 Lord Carlisle procured his preferment to a Prebendal Stall at Canterbury, and in the ensuing year the Dean and Chapter of that Cathedral presented him to the Vicarage of Tenterden, Kent. He resigned this Living, however, about 1806, in favor of his elder son,* who had been the curate of the Parish for several years, and in 1808 the Dean and Chapter gave him the Rectory of the United Churches of St. Michael's, Queenhithe and Trinity the Less, London, in charge of which he remained until his death. Some ten years after his wife's death Dr. Coombe married an English lady, who bore him several children. He died, after a short illness, on the 15th of August, 1822, at his house in Hertford Street, London.

"Dr. Coombe was an eloquent and impressive Preacher; as a Scholar he was entitled to a distinguished place among the learned of his day; his reading was various and extensive, and under the veil of an unambitious retirement, he had acquired a knowledge of general principles which would have added lustre to the highest situations. Among his acquaintances he had numbered Sir Joshua Reynolds, Johnson, Goldsmith, Jortin, and Beattie, with the latter of whom he was in the habits of correspondence. He also possessed by inheritance the affectionate friendship of Dr. Franklin. Hence his conversation, enriched with literary anecdote, and tempered by a refined and judicious taste, was both entertaining and instructive, while a peculiar benevolence of disposition, joined to the most unaffected piety, rendered this wise and unpretending man a pattern of Christian excellence."

*John Riché Coombe, the only surviving son of Mr. Coombe's first marriage; born in Philadelphia May 2, 1774, and sent out to his father in 1781. He was graduated at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, B. A., 1798, and M. A., 1805. About 1808 he married Charlotte, daughter and heiress of Admiral Hervey, R. N., of Sparkswood, Kent, by whom he had one daughter, Charlotte, who married Major Willock. The Reverend John R. Coombe died May 12, 1855, at Sparks Rolverden, Kent.

Wm Shippin

Of the American officers who fell at Princeton, on the third of January, 1777, General Mercer was buried on the south side of Christ Church yard; Ensign Anthony Morris in the Friends' ground; Colonel John Haslet in the Presbyterian ground on Bank Street; and Captain William Shippin at St. Peter's.

A careful search has failed to throw any light on the parentage or early life of the last of these four gallant men. He was not connected with the Shippen family of this city, nor did he ever, as his widow and children and all who have mentioned him since his death, write his name SHIPPEN. In all his newspaper advertisements, the bond from which the signature above given is copied, and in his will now at the Register's office, in fact wherever he controlled the spelling of his name, it always appears SHIPPIN. The earliest found mention of his is the record of his marriage June 2, 1770, to Benjamina Fisher.* Five years later he advertises "Shad, Herrings, Rounds of Beef and Neets' Tongues cured in the best manner for exportation by William Shippin, at Market Street Wharf." This advertisement first appeared in the Pennsylvania Packet, April 3rd, 1775, no doubt soon after he had established himself in business. He must have followed the sea at some previous time, for on the 22nd of March 1776, Congress, at the request of the owner of a privateer then fitting out "to cruise off the coast of Virginia,"† gave him a Captain's commission, and a supply of powder for his vessel. If he ever assumed command of this vessel, the name of which cannot be ascertained, it was for but a very short time,* as before the middle of May, 1776, he was Captain of the marines on board the privateer Hancock. This vessel must not be confounded with the Continental Frigate Hancock, nor with the armed boat of the same name belonging to the Pennsylvania Navy. The former, built at Newburyport, Mass., was not launched until July 1776,† and from the time she went to sea in August until her capture by the "Rainbow," July 8th, 1777, was commanded by Captain John Manly. The latter was one of the thirteen "boats propelled by rowers, each boat carrying two howitzers, besides swivels, pikes and muskets," built in 1775 by order of the Committee of Safety for service on the Delaware. The privateer Hancock, variously described as brig, brigantine, and schooner, was a vessel of about 110 tons burthen, which had been built some years before the war for the merchant service. The owners, John Bayard and others, of Philadelphia, having refitted her in 1776 with an armament of twelve guns and a crew of eighty men, gave the command to Wingate Newman.

The Hancock sailed from Philadelphia on the 15th of June, 1776, and the first two prizes were taken about the end of July. The third prize was "a large three decked ship, named the Reward, of between five and six hundred tons burthen. She was a twenty gun ship, last war, in the service of the British King. She was from Tortola, bound to London, and had on board between ten and eleven hundred hogsheads of sugar, eighty-six hogsheads of rum, twelve bales of cotton, nine cannon and some brass ditto. There were on board said ship, a number of turtles, directed to Lord North, with his name cut in the shell, the best of which, Captain Wingate Newman, master of the Privateer, is determined to send to the Hon. John Hancock."‡

*This may have been one of the vessels alluded to in a petition to the Orphans' Court, in 1787, which says he "lost two vessels by the enemy."

The Hancock returned about the first of December, after a very successful cruise.* Shippin and his marines were in a short time transferred to an armed boat of the Pennsylvania Navy which was about to proceed up the Delaware to watch the movements of the approaching British force. On the 16th of December Margaret Morris, of Burlington, writes in her Journal "poor Dick took the glass, and resting against a tree, took a view of the fleet; the people on board suspected it was an enemy that was watching their motions. They manned a boat and sent her on shore." When Mrs. Morris had explained that it was her son whose only object was to look at the troops "The captain, a smart little fellow named Shippin [sic], said he wished he could see the spy glass. S. D. produced it, and very civilly desired his acceptance of it, which I was sorry for, as I often amused myself in looking through it."† Towards the end of the month the marines of the fleet "joined General Washington's army and at the battle of prince Town Captain Shippin was killed."‡

His remains were temporarily interred in the Friends' burying ground at Stony Brook, not far from the field of battle, from whence they were removed to Philadelphia, twelve days later. The hearses which conveyed

*The following list of prizes taken by the privateer Hancock of Philadelphia, in 1776, has been compiled from the newspapers, and is complete to November 1st, as the Pennsylvania Evening Post in announcing the capture of the brig Polly says "This is the ninth prize taken by the Hancock since she sailed from this port:"

his and General Mercer's bodies, both crossed the Delaware on the ice.* His funeral is thus described in a newspaper of the time :†

"Yesterday the remains of Captain William Shippin, [sic] who who was killed at Princeton the third instant, gloriously fighting for the liberty of his country, were interred in St. Peter's Church yard. His funeral was attended by the Council of Safety, the Members of Assembly, officers of the army, a troop of Virginia light horse, and a great number of inhabitants. This brave and unfortunate man was in his twenty-seventh year, and has left a widow and three children to lament the death of an affectionate husband and a tender parent, his servants a kind master, and his neighbours a sincere and obliging friend."

At a sitting of the Orphans' Court, August 20th, 1787, "The Memorial of Jeremiah Fisher was read in the following words, to-wit—

That the memorialist as Guardian for the Children of Captain William Shippin, Petitioned the Court in August, 1786, for the half pay, or such other part as they in their wisdom should think meet to grant the aforesaid Children; who then allowed Two hundred Pounds to be paid and fifty pounds per Annum for three years; in April, 1787, the memorialist renewed his application which had not yet been decided upon. He now begs leave to lay some particulars before the Court. When Captain Shippin was killed his unfortunate widow found that the Property left would not pay his debts, owing to his having lost two Vessels by the Enemy. In the height of war, having four children, her Country borrowing money from Individuals, she did not think it was a proper time to apply for the support which was promised to those Brave Men, and their families (who stepped forth to resque their Country from Slavery) in case any accident should happen them. In this situation she applied to her Friends, and they lent her money to support her and her children, untill her Country should be able to grant her relief, with which and the industry of her Mother she did. Two of her Children died before the end of the war, her Mother and self are since Dead, leaving two Children destitute.”* An order for full half pay was at once granted.

The two children referred to in the petition were William Shippen, (as he spelled his name,) for many years a hatter in this city, who died January 7th, 1827, in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania; and Ann, who married August 21st, 1792, John Philip De Haas,† son of General John Philip De Haas. A very interesting note on General De Haas by D. McN. Stauffer, recently published in the “Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography,” concludes as follows: “The similarity of names of father and son has been a cause of trouble with biographers—one being mistaken for the other. This son was an Ensign during the Revolution in his father’s regiment, and in the early part of the present century left Philadelphia and settled upon land on the west branch of the Susquehanna, granted to his father—then Major De Haas—by the Proprietors, Thomas and Richard Penn, in 1768: this land being a portion of the 24,000 acres taken up by the officers of Colonel Bouquet’s command.

The letters of the general and his son are all sealed with an imposing ‘coat of arms,’ which may be important in proving his ancestry. Unfortunately none of the impressions are perfect. All that can be made out is the crest, which is ‘Between two wings displayed, a stag springing,’ and at the bottom of the shield, ‘a stag courant.’”

Du Simitiere

Pierre Eugene Du Simitiere, whose last resting place in St. Peter's Church yard is unmarked and forgotten, may fairly claim our attention for a moment.

Born in Geneva, in the first quarter of the eighteenth century, and endowed with considerable artistic talent, he became a painter, and by the practice of his profession gained a livelihood in the many foreign countries to which his wandering spirit led him. He appears to have arrived in the West Indies about 1750, and for the next ten years travelled about from one island to another, making water-color drawings, collecting coins, shells and botanical specimens, and gathering material for the history of the European settlement of the islands. During this period, the greater part of which was spent on the islands belonging to Great Britain, he thoroughly mastered the English language, which, on his arrival in New York in 1764 or 1765, he was able to speak and write with great fluency. After leaving New York, he spent some time in Burlington and then, in the early part of 1766, came to Philadelphia.

In 1768 he was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society, and in 1777 one of the curators of the Society. In the latter year he was drafted into the Pennsylvania Militia, and a heavy fine was imposed upon him for not supplying a substitute. His petition to the Supreme Executive Council for the remission of his fine, contains this passage in regard to himself and the object of his residence in America :

"Your memorialist begs leave upon this occasion to represent to this Honorable Council that he is a foreigner and a native of the Republic of Geneva, that he has for many years travelled through various parts of this Continent and the West Indies, not without great expense and fatigue to himself, in pursuit of the natural and civil History of America, unsupported by any public or private encouragement. That your memorialist is in no public way of business whatever, nor settled in any part of the Continent—that he lives in lodgings wherever he is, and at considerable expense, for the defraying of which he now and then makes use of a little talent he has for painting among his acquaintance, and altho' he has resided for some time past in this City, it has been entirely owing to the critical situation of public affairs, which did not admit of his removal elsewhere without great expense and the hazard of losing what he had collected at considerable cost and with much pains—that his long continuance here has also been extremely detrimental to his general pursuit of natural knowledge, the only object of his travel.”*

He designed the vignette for the title page of Aitkin's Pennsylvania Magazine in 1775, and the frontispiece for the United States Magazine in 1779, and drew for the third number of the former a picture of a New Electrical Machine. In 1776 the committee appointed by Congress to prepare designs for a medal to commemorate the Declaration, and a national seal, engaged his assistance. John Adams, one of the committee, in a letter to his wife, August 14th, 1776, writes as follows:

“There is a gentleman here of French extraction, whose name is Du Simitiere, a painter by profession, whose designs are very ingenious, and his drawings well executed. For the medal he proposes, Liberty, with her spear and pileus, leaning on General Washington. The British fleet in Boston harbor with all their sterns towards the town; the American troops marching in. For the seal, he proposes, the arms of the several nations from whence America has been peopled, as English, Irish, Dutch, German, &c., each in a shield. On one side of them, Liberty with her pileus, on the other, a rider in his uniform, with his rifle gun in one hand, and his tomahawk in the other.”†

*Pennsylvania Archives, 2nd Ser., III, 121.

†Letters of John Adams, addressed to his wife, Vol. I, p. 151.

The committee's report was not acted upon by Congress, nor was that of a committee appointed for the same purpose in 1779, which, it is said, also employed Du Simitiere.

In the same letter Adams says: "This M. Du Simitiere is a very curious man. He has begun a collection of materials for a history of this revolution. He begins with the first advises of the tea ships. He cuts out of the newspapers every scrap of intelligence, and every piece of speculation, and pastes it upon clean paper, arranging them under the head of that State to which they belong, and intends to bind them up in volumes. He has a list of every speculation and pamphlet concerning independence, and another concerning forms of government."

During the Revolution he drew portraits of many prominent men of the period. A series of thirteen portraits, comprising Washington, Steuben, Silas Deane, Joseph Reed, Gouverneur Morris, General Gates, John Jay, Wm. H. Drayton, Henry Laurens, Charles Thomson, Samuel Huntingdon, John Dickinson and Benedict Arnold, all engraved by B. Reading, were published, May 1783, in a quarto volume now very rare, by W. Richardson of London.

The College of New Jersey conferred upon him 1781 an honorary degree of Master of Arts.

He died in October, 1784, and was buried on the 10th of that month at St. Peter's. In March following his administrators announced the sale of "The American Museum, collected by the late Pierre Eugene Du Simitiere, Esq." The Philadelphia Library Company became the purchasers of his manuscript and broadsides, and the twelve volumes thus obtained are among its greatest treasures.
